Security is the business of all -Adetoyinbo

Staff and students of the Federal University of Technology, Akure have been urged to see security as the business of all. The Deputy Chief Security Officer, Dr. Olusola Adetoyinbo gave this advice during the orientation programme organized for newly admitted students. Addressing the students on the issue of security, Dr. Adetoyinbo told them to be security conscious urging them to be on the alert for suspicious characters. Speaking further, he said the students should report suspicious persons and gatherings to the Security Unit. He admonished them not to get involved in acts capable of jeopardizing their future as students and to shun cultism in order not to forfeit their chances as students of the Institution.

He described cultism as the greatest life destroyer among the youth. He said many youths have died prematurely by engaging in cultism.

In her contribution the Associate Director, Centre for Gender Issues in Science and Technology (CEGIST) Dr. (Mrs.) Helen Ogunsuyi urged the students to dress decently on campus to avoid harassment and other untoward situation. She said the decline in cultural and moral values; especially as it pertains to sartorial decorum contribute to the rise of sexual violence and other negative phenomenon. Dr. (Mrs.) Ogunsuyi called for strong legislation against assault and advocated for stiffer penalties for offenders.
